A yearbook has two purposes-- it preserves some of the memories from each year at college and it also serves as a valuable learning experience for those of us who work on the book. Each UNR student pays for the publication of the Artemisia through tuition fees... however there is little money left for staff salaries. Many students work long and hard to contribute their photos, art, stories, etc., not to mention those who actually put it all together. Thanks to the generosity of our advertisers, some of the staff does get paid. We would like to express our appreciation to these businesses from our community and state and ask that you please patronize the following:

This is a picture of a television set being turned off. But it could be one of a television set being turned on.

We're not trying to darken a bright future, but it could happen if our energy supply is ever depleted. As an energy supplier, our responsibility is to make sure this won't happen.

How successful we are depends partly on you: if you use the present energy supply wisely; and if you help us find practical ways to use new energy sources.

We must each do our part if we are to provide dependable power for future generations. The next time you reach to turn on the television, stop and think.

We think you'll see the picture.
